~~My dear~~ children:

James, Edward, Joseph and Rachel

I have at length reached your dear Sister's residence, and mingled with her nice little flock. They are interesting children - and I am sure you would feel gratified could you join me here. Rachel Ann Clarke accompanied me to meet your brother in law about half way - and she drove back to the Barker. Lewis & Alfred accompanied their Papa to make acquaintance with the ground. The country is picturesque, the roads improved since I was here before, and the fields fenced in so that there is an almost continuous line of fencing the whole distance. Brother William showed me the spot where they entertained Prince Alfred, and where he, as Chairman of the District, read an Address to the Prince. They erected a Fest of Rich cloths, and spread one on the ground, and pronounced a hearty though not sumptuous banquet for his "Royal Highness". I understood that two girls, dressed in German costume, stood one on each side of the road holding a blue ribbon, which signified the prince recognized and pulled up. He indulges in driving four in hand: he was dressed in plain tanned clothes, dusty with travelling - small felt hat on his head, no gloves. He alighted, had a watch look his bank, was very affable, charged the horses for others and drove on, declaring that his horses were fresh enough to take you another stage.

In the mean time Lord Newry came up, not in the least mood from being half an hour behind, but Prince Alfred comforted him (doubtfully) by assuring him that his being behind was a matter of but little consequence. He must not expect always to be on the same footing.

Tom describes <sup>the prince</sup> him as an amiable young man, as one who seems desirous to please every one, all of the children went out with back road when he passed, and <sup>the</sup> waived her handkerchief, and elicited a passing bow - the children are full of the prince, and have pronouns with flags; and a (make believe) bugle.

The country now is much burned up, and the harvest is full activity. This morning Tom had to go to Strathalbyn on business, and took me and Louisa with him. We passed through a country that would be interesting were it clad in normal verdure. We saw two or three blackies moving on, thrashing out the wheat - one with four, another with five horses. They seemed to be doing it very comfortably. The yield of wheat will probably not be an average of 5 bushels per acre throughout the country. Some farmers have absolutely nothing and have turned their cattle into the fields. There is one in William's neighbourhood, a large grower, who sowed 500 acres. that has so done. Some will bear 15, or 16, bushels per acre or some of their ground, in other parts but little. Brokers tell me does not expect more than 100 bushels instead of 2000. - One evening making a walk with Fred Mackenzie we saw three men reaping a small patch; as we looked over the fence I saw there is a 40 bushel stubble. I did say I will go and land a tract. I followed and when we came to the thick standing wheat; - not a grain could we find: - nothing but shrivelled grains not much thicker than a pin - and yet the heads looked full and the straw perfectly bright - almost too white. How was it? I do think that it might be footed.

Strathalbyn is a very pretty Township, and of good size; many of the straits have each a good bridge over the River. (not along stream) but the bridges superior to the Ludlow Bridge; none of them erected with great judgment.

I have seen Lydia Wood & Daughter and her sons at Mr. Worken, Tom Wood shortly returned to them from England, but they would not receive him; and at length an agreement has been made to allow him something annually, <sup>(£80)</sup> and he has gone away. I have discovered that Lydia Wood is Lydia Brown; the daughter of John Brown of Warrford, and sister to Edward Brown, one of my Antarctic companions.

Brookholm and Siden ally long to come to Tasmania to reside; and have been talking about coming and where - but are talked about the Atlantic Island detacher train, beyond Lopez and drawing it, and Rt. Stephens plan (Swanwick) the Enas Land well, talk does not cool much. It is a difficult thing <sup>for a person</sup> to fix, even in Tasmania.

I have thought what you doing - and suppose the thing accomplished, and perhaps the best in hand - or the best at work. However I must leave it. I am not in a position to help with my hands.
- on going to Strathalbyn. I observed large areas of land with the trees dead there, and they said that they had been baked, or girdled; - but when says this
- and what caused their death is not clear. It adds to the apprehensions of some, that the country will eventually become denuded <sup>of timber</sup>.

I expect to return to the 1st of October or second day next and thereby the shortest course to the port to Melbourne.
Your brother Selmer has been reported daily from the sea with his load - sometimes fast. Possibly I may see him before I start. It would be pleasant indeed to do so. When our off, it is very uncertain indeed when I may reach Adelaide, with my dear love all remain your affectionate Father
